'Glee' cast hits dance floor

What did the cast of Fox's hit musical series "Glee" do while in Chicago on Saturday to tape an episode of "Oprah"?

Exactly what you would think they'd do: Dance.

Mark Salling (Puck), Amber Riley (Mercedes), Heather Morris (Brittany), Harry Shum Jr. (Mike) and Naya Rivera (Santana) partied at Jbar for about three hours Saturday and spent much of the night dancing. The teen-playing actors, who are of legal drinking age—or in Salling and Shum's case, very of age—drank Belvedere vodka and ate cheesecake lollipops from David Burke's Primehouse.

They left the River North bar around 2 a.m. "So ready for takeoff," Riley tweeted Sunday morning. "I'm so sleepy."

On Monday, the cast members will perform for another famous Chicagoan when they appear at the annual White House Easter Egg Roll. About 30,000 people are expected to attend the event on the South Lawn.

"Thank you Chicago!" Shum tweeted. "Such a beautiful city and I'm glad that we got time to explore a little. Thank you Oprah 4 having us!! Obama we coming!"

The "Glee" episode of "Oprah" airs Wednesday. The cast will be back for two sold-out shows May 25 and 26 at the Rosemont Theatre.
